ANARCHY STILL LIVES.

The Shooting of Mr. Frick Leads to Alarming Disclosures—America's Great Danger is in Anarchy.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 26.—Two regiments of the national guard have been ordered home, and it is probable that the main body of soldiers will be withdrawn in a few days.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 26.—Anarchy in the United States is not dead. It is not even sleeping. Its high priests are just as wide awake, just as venemous in their ramifications, just as extensive, and perhaps more so, than they have ever been. The lesson and warning afforded to the element by the execution of Spies, Parsons and their associates, and by the repeated prosecutions and convictions of Herr Johan Most, have failed even to bruise the head of the transplanted monster. Anarchy is as much a thing of life as ever. So much has been evinced by the attempt upon the life of Mr. Frick and the subsequent developments that have come to the surface. The police are naturally jubilant over the arrest of Carl Kolb, and believe they are now on the way toward the fountain head of the conspiracy that culminated in the tragedy of Saturday last. For some time past the socialistic and anarchistic elements of Allegheny have been keeping under cover and the authorities have flattered themselves that their vigilance for the past two years had been rewarded and that the element had lost its chief. They have, however, been undeceived for the search of Kolb's residence last evening proved conclusively that the circle, or social, or whatever it may be called had been continuously engaged in active propoganda and intimately associated with other enemies of free government and liberty loving institutions in different parts of the United States. In the rooms were found stalo varieties of anarchistic literature and correspondence indicating that anarchy has a biding place either in the persons or of groups in individuals in New York, Chicago, Denver and other points. A large number of letter and cipher communications were also brought to light indicating the existance of a general system of communication. One of these ciphers enclosed in an envelope appeared to be based upon the Hebrew alphabet. This appeared to dove tail in with a second that appeared to be simply a combination of unintelligable scrawls and this by figures on its back was apparently a key to a third, in the form of an ingenius geometrical chart, with numerous curves, each different from the other. A lineal road map of the United States had upon it these marks in the order to indicate air lines between New York and Chicago and these were marked at intervals with figures, which related to cipher words on the back.

So extensive was the supply of anarchist literature found in the place as to indicate that it must have been used as headquarters for the distribution of this dangerous stuff throughout the country. There were numerous copies of Freedom, a rabidly anarchistic sheet emanating from Chicago, and edited by Lucy Parsons, the dusky relict of the executed anarchist. The paper was filled with matter bloodthirsty and bombastic, some of the articles calling upon anarchists to pull down the wage question and wage slavery. One copy contained a letter from a local anarchist telling Mrs. Parsons that her paper was truly an advocate, and defends the principles of revolutionary communistic anarchism as did the Alarm, edited by her husband, and hoped for its cordial support of all the "comrades" hereabouts. There was also a bundle of another Chicago anarchistic sheets called Gaslief, printed in German and of Herr Most's Freheit. Some had black and others with red borders. Various communications in German, and written from widely separated places, enough to fill a small satchel, were found, while as a final the police came across a packet of tickets for a raffle of a fine relief picture of the five martyrs of the working class, Spies, Parsons, Linng, Engle and Fisher, the proceeds to go "for the benefit of the English agitation" and the raffae to be held next month.

Knolb is still held at the central station and an information of some kind will be made against him today in order to insure his detention. The police are in consultation with the law officials of the county this morning on this point. He will probably be charged with conspiracy and will be made participis criminus to the shooting. He is very unlikely to secure bail, for his employers, who had no knowledge of his anarchistic temperament, have declined to stand by him and the combined available capital of the anarchistic colony of Allegheny will probably not reach a fiftieth part of the amount that may be demanded for his appearance. All the available detectives of the city are engaged on a search for the satchel carried by Berkman when he reached the city, as it is thought it may contain documents or other matter which will afford additional clues to the conspiracy. It is not at the hotel nor at the union station, and the police think that he may have left it at some saloon. It is of the telescope variety and grayish in color. Berkman is beginning to change under the strict regime and frugal care at the county jail, and he is more ugly and morose in his disposition than ever. He denies that he is acquainted with Knobb, or stopped at his house, and when confronted with a man who saw him in the place, he persisted in his denial with considerable volubility and a dangerous gleam in his eye.

When he was told that under the six informations filed against him by Secretary Lovejoy, charging felonious cutting and felonious entry, he could upon conviction be sentenced to twenty-three years imprisonment, he merely shrugged his shoulders and then went to the further corner of his cell, and puffed viciously at his cigarette.

The report from Mr. Frick's home this morning was that all through the night his condition was entirely satisfactory. He slept most of the night and awoke this morning rested and cheerful. No dangerous symptoms have developed and the danger is believed to be over, unless some unexpected complications should arise. His physicians are entirely satisfied with the condition of their patient. Every symptom is carefully watched and so far none to be feared have developed and the danger phase has been passed. The officials of the company have shown that they are capable of taking care of the present situation, even with Mr. Carnegie away and Mr. Frick disabled. This morning Mr. Lovejoy said Mr. Carnegie will not come here until we send for him. He cabled, asking if his presence was needed and was answered that it was not; that we were in good shape and that it was not necessary for him to come. Mr. Carnegie was away from a telegraph station and did not learn of the shooting until yesterday. At the central police station at noon, the officials stated to the United Press that they regard the arrest of Bauer as the most important since the shooting. He is a professional agitator, drawing his entire support from the anarchist groups and devotes his time to the distribution of the revolutionary literature received from Chicago. He lives with a shoemaker at 73 Spring Garden street, Allegheny, where he was captured. On Sunday he was seen entering Knolb's house with a parcel. He is been particularly identified as a man who was with Berkman in the corridor of the Carnegie company's building on Saturday just before the shooting, and handed Berkman a small package, just as he entered the elevator. This package is supposed to be either the revolver or the cartridges afterwards found in Berkman's pocket. This development has so far been kept secret by the police, although it is admitted that the second man was seen in company with Berkman on the street. The man named Paul Eckert, who occupied a portion of Knolb's house, was for a short time under the suspicion of the police, but his statements being satisfactory he was not detained.

In searching Bauer's house in Allegheny, the police found a breach loading gun, a bull dog revolver, several packages of cartridges of 22 to 24 calibre; several peculiar looking articles shaped something like a half flattened marble and with a string in the end, believed to be powerful explosives; numerous books of anarchy, anarchistic literature, papers and pictures of the Chicago anarchists. A good sized load has been taken to the central station.

Bauers has admitted that he is the man who distributed the anarchistic literature among the militia and strikers at Homestead. He also admits that he met and talked with Berkman at Knolb's house last week. He has also been identified as the man who was seen about the entrance to the Duquesne club house of Sixth avenue last week.

AFTER A SUSPECTED ACCOMPLICE.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 26.—The police here received word yesterday afternoon from Superintendent O'Mara, of the Pittsburg police, to arrest F. Mollick, charged with being an accessory to the attempted assassination of H. C. Frick. Mollick was employed as a journeyman baker by J. J. Heidle, a confectioner, of this place. When the police went to arrest him they found that he had quietly left sometime during the forenoon. Mollick came to Long Branch from New York about three weeks ago. On Wednesday or Thursday of last week Mollick, as he called himself, went to the Adams express office and sent a money package to A. Berkman, Allegheny City. Postmaster Lane was seen by the police and stated that Mollick had received several letters through the office here. It is not known whence his letter came. Mollick is described as heavy set, broad shoulders and of German parentage. He has dark hair, is five feet, seven inches high, has black eyes and is about 25 or 30 years old. He was very reticent while here and as far as known made no acquaintances. He watched the papers closely and read them thoroughly.

It is thought the report that the police had connected others than Berkman with the attempt upon Mr. Frick's life in New York and elsewhere frightened him away.

FRICK'S CONDITION.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 26.—Secretary Lovejoy has just sent the following bulletin to the United Press: "Our 10 o'clock advices from Mr. Frick's residence were to the effect that he had passed a decidedly comfortable night, in spite of the extreme heat, and that no dangerous symptoms have developed."

HERR MOST WILL BE ARRESTED.

Chief of Police Murphy, of Allegheny, says that a warrant is out for the arrest of Herr Most.

THE WEATHER.

Telegraphic Reports Favorable to a Change in Temperature—Yesterday's Sun Strokes.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 26.—St. Louis was like a huge furnace yesterday. The direct effect of this heat was a partial paralysis of trade and a death list of fifty-one, the largest in many years. Of this number about forty were children ranging in age from five years and under. Almost without exception these forty babies died from the excessive heat. There were a couple of score of heat prostrations on the streets yesterday and the patrol wagons were rushing to and from the hospitals from noon until last evening. Of fifteen cases of sunstroke reported since Sunday night, three have died and six are dying. The dead are: John DucBaptiste, an iron moulder; Joseph Fretzer, waiter, and Ernest Kline, baker. The six persons now at the point of death, are as follows: Fred Bennett, sixty, Clayton, Missouri; James Bowman, a laborer; Fred Mahler, teamster; John Piltgens, C. Snyde, laborers; E. Welf, moulder. The other victims now in a dangerous condition who have been identified are: George Hoffman, ice dealer; John Lewis, Sarah O'Brien, aged seventy; August Tegins, George Thomas, a colored carpenter. Strangely the majority of the cases of genuine sunstrike did not occur until 4 p. m., or later, though prostrations were plenty enough earlier in the day.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., July 26.—Henry Butcher, a young farmer was overcome yesterday by the heat while pitching wheat at a thresher and lived but a couple of hours. A young man named Scott died at Darlington from being over heated in the harvest field Saturday. Colonel Tribby, a prominent citizen, was stricken yesterday and is not likely to recover. At Jeffersonville, Catherine Koerber could not stand the terrible heat and was found dead in bed yesterday. Julia Stanley, six months, was also found dead in bed, having died from heat. The thermometer registered 101 degrees in the shade. At Michigan City, T. Shappell, of Detroit, was drowned in the harbor yesterday afternoon. He was overcome by the heat and fell from the dock.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., July 24.—The last two days the hottest weather of the season has been experienced, the temperature ranging from 93° to 95°. There have been a number of prostrations and one death, a man named William Biehle succumbing yesterday. At Springfield Martin Murphy died from the effects of heat. At Decatur William Andrews, a brick mason, was overcome by the heat. He left his work and ran through the streets like a mad man, but quickly succumbed and was dead within a half hour. At Quincy, Andrew Strum was overcome by the heat and died twenty minutes later.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 26.—Sunday and Monday were the two hottest days that have been experienced in Cleveland for many years. The temperature during the past forty-eight hours has averaged about 90°, except during the storm of Sunday evening, when it fell about 16° in half an hour. Three deaths have been caused by the heat since Sunday morning. Today promises to be hotter than was either Sunday or Monday.

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—The intense heat continues today with hardly a breath of air stirring. At 11 o'clock this morning the mercury stood at 94½ in the shade, and 110 in the sun at Seventh and Chestnut streets.

CINCINNATI, July 26.—The weather today is slightly cooler than yesterday. The thermometer at 10 o'clock registered 90 degrees at the top of the government building. Seventeen persons were prostrated by heat yesterday, four of whom died. Several others are in a very serious condition.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 26.—At 8 o'clock this morning the government bureau stated it was 87 degrees hot. At 9 o'clock the thermometer registered 90, at 10 o'clock, 92, and at 11 o'clock 94 was shown. These figures are five degrees in advance of yesterday's records for the same hours and the maximum heat than was 97.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 26.—The thermometer at 10 o'clock this morning registered 89 in the shade.

BOSTON, July 26.—Weather clear and warm, thermometer 90 degrees.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 26.—Weather clear, thermometer 91 degrees.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 26.—The maximum temperature in the shade here yesterday was 94 degrees. Today promises to be very warm and the sky is cloudless.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 26.—Weather continues hot and remains the same as yesterday. The thermometer stands at 90 in the shade, with considerable of a breeze stirring.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 26.—All through the night the temperature hugged the 90° mark, and not a breath of air was stirring. At 11 o'clock this morning the thermometer at the signal service office registered 90° in the shade. Shortly after 11 o'clock a slight rain fell, which gives rise to the hope that the present spell of hot weather will soon pass away. Notwithstanding the intense heat, but few cases of sunstroke are reported, and of these but three have proved fatal.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 26.—The heat for the past few days has been succeeded by a decidedly cool wave which reached this locality this morning, being ushered in by a heavy rain accompanied by sharp thunder and lightning. At the local signal service bureau generally cooler weather, with showers, is reported throughout the northwest.

A HEADLESS CORPSE!

Found in the Road—Killed With a Knife and Then Decapitated by His Slayer.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 26.—At Cosiburg, Ala., yesterday the headless corpse of Albert Gutlier was found in the road. He had been killed by knife wounds, and the head decapitated by his slayer, Albert Freeman. Both men are ex-convicts, and had evidently renewed an old quarrel while riding along together. Freeman disappeared with a mining company's mule, and bloodhounds are on his trail.

"COLUMBIA,"

The Most Powerful Engine of Destruction in the World, Launched at Philadelphia Today.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 26.—The new United States cruiser, No. 12, was launched at Cramp's shipyard this afternoon in the presence of a large crowd of spectators. Among those present, besides a number of naval experts, senators and representatives and agents of foreign governments, were Vice President Morton, Secretary Tracy, Assistant Secretary of State Grinnell, Senator Hiscock, Commodore Wilson and Naval Constructors Bowles and Woodward, Mrs. Morton and Miss Edith Morton. The last named young lady performed in a graceful manner the act of christening the new vessel, "Columbia." The cruiser is in many respects a unique vessel and is the fastest commerce destroyer ever launched in any waters, and of the purpose intended the most effective engine of destruction the world ever saw. She is 400 feet long, has a speed of twenty-one knots, is made entirely of American material and cost $2,750,000.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

Bay City, Mich., Swept by the Flames—Loss, $1,000,000.

BAY CITY, Mich., July 26.—The most disastrous fire that has ever visited Bay City broke out at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the lumber piles south of Miller & Turner's mill, at the foot of Thirty-first street, and raged for five hours almost unchecked. Over thirty-six blocks of the city were completely destroyed, entailing a loss of $1,000,000, leaving 300 families homeless, and it is feared, causing the loss of several lives. One woman is known to be dead at this time. The dead so far as known are: Mrs. Frank Mason and her two children, burned. She went into her house to get her children, and in an incredibly short time the building was in flames. They were not seen to come out. Some of the heaviest losers are E. Reynolds, shoe store, $2,000; G. C. Beebe, drugs, $2,500; Gardner & Laird, furniture and stoves, $8,000; Stover & Larkin, hardware, $12,000; Miller & Turner, mill and lumber, $150,000; Miller's lumber yards, $25,000; Briske & Forcis, general store, $15,000; A. B. Gould, hotel and five houses, $7,000. There were hundreds of losses, unobtainable last night, which will amount to from $5,000 to $5,000 a piece. The loss to Miller & Turner will probably be $150,000, which is covered by insurance. The common council met last night and took action toward the immediate relief of the 300 homeless families. Another fire yesterday afternoon burned two drill houses at the Pitts & Crango mill. Loss, $3,000; insured. The entire loss will reach upwards of $1,000,000 but it was impossible to learn last night the extent to which different parties are insured.

NET HIS FATE.

A Louisiana Desperado Shot Down by His Brother-in-Law.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 26.—A. W. Alexander, a labor agent, was shot and instantly killed by his brother-in-law, A. H. Jones, at the door of the latter's residence, No. 12 South Rampart street, at 7 o'clock last evening. He was a gay lothario and treated his wife most brutally. He left her but returned two years ago, since which time she has lived a dog's life with him. He frequently threatened to kill her and her family. Yesterday he attempted to cut her throat. She told her brother. Last evening Alexander showed up at the house and was met by A. H. Jones and making a suspicious move was shot dead on the door step. He was a desperate character, having killed four men and caused the suicide of a young woman he had wronged.

Statement Repudiated.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 26.—Local union No. 8, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in a meeting last night, repudiated an alleged official statement of the district council that it had adopted a resolution for the removal of the office of General Secretary P. J. McGuire from this city.

Comedian Fay.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 26.—The friends of Hugh J. Fay, the comedian, are rejoicing at the news that the report of his death ten days ago has no foundation in fact. Cablegrams from Fay and his bride to friends in this city state that he is very much alive in Liverpool.

A Family Quarrel.

WHEELING, W. V., July 26.—Michael Mahlan, sixteen years of age, shot and instantly killed Samuel Wiesburg during a family quarrel last night. He also shot Mrs. Wiesburg, inflicting fatal injuries. Mahlan and his father, who also took part in the row, have been arrested.

WED AT MIDNIGHT.

Two Well Known Young People Married at a Lawyer's Office—The Day in the Courts.

Last evening, Mary A. Langham, a pretty young woman who resides near Antwerp, Ohio, entered the office of Justice Wilkinson and swore out an affidavit for the arrest of Frank H. Fleck, the son of a prominent farmer, who also resides near Antwerp, on the charge of bastardy.

Fleck was arrested and brought to this city by Constable W. H. Kauffman, reaching the office of Justice Wilkinson at 11 o'clock. He at once sought a lawyer, securing N. D. Doughman. The parties finally agreed that the best way out of their difficulties was to get married, and a messenger was accordingly dispatched after a marriage license.

The clerk's office was closed and waiting on Deputy Clerk Tom W. Hagen at his home, he was aroused from his sleep and went to the office where the proper legal paper for permission to wed was issued. Then returning to Attorney Doughman's office in the bank block, Justice Wilkinson married the young people just as the hands on the big court house clock pointed to half past twelve o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleck received the congratulations of those present and arm in arm they left the office. A buggy was in waiting for them on Court street and together they drove to their home. The parents of both the young people are wealthy, their fathers being farmers, and the affair will create something of a sensation in the neighborhood in which they live.

A SERIOUS CASE.

Proceedings by the state against Mrs. Eliza Connett are pending in Justice Wilkinson's court. The charge is a serious one, Mrs. Connett being accused of setting her savage dog on a little Arab girl who entered the yard at the Connett residence in the southern part of the city while on her rounds as a peddler of small wares. The girl was thrown to the ground by the dog, and the ferocious animal lacerated her terribly. The brute bit a large hole out of her right leg at the thigh and broke the bones of the girl's hand. The girl is now under the care of the doctor and was so serious last night that she could not attend the preliminary examination, which has been postponed indefinitely. James M. Robinson, her attorney, acknowledged himself responsible for Mrs. Connett's appearance when her case was called and she was released.

BILLY CHANDLER.

Chandler is the name of the Wabash man who was with Mrs. Johnson on the night that her husband was murdered by Strayer a week ago, and hence this clipping from the Wabash Plain-Dealer of yesterday will be interesting: "Billy Chandler returned from Fort Wayne this morning. The company has laid him off until his case can be investigated. He states that there is no truth in the statement that he was arrested on suspicion for the killing of John P. Johnson, and that he has the certificate of the prosecuting attorney at Fort Wayne in proof thereof. He admits being with the woman Johnson, but emphatically denies all criminality. Billy's friends here hope that he may regain his position and profit by the experience of the past few days."

SHERIFF VIBERG'S PICTURE.

Bob Driebelbiss, the abstractor, is a practical joker, and this morning played a practical joke on Sheriff Viberg. Entering the latter's office, he pulled from beneath his coat an apparatus. "I have purchased a kodak," said Bob, "it is one of the best in the market and I will take your picture in two minutes." "Try it on me," said the sheriff. "All right," replied Bob, and getting Mr. Viberg to stand up, he leveled the so-called kodak at him. "Now remain perfectly quiet," continued Bob, "and keep your eyes fixed on the glass." The officer of the law did as directed and soon "sizz," "sizz" went the supposed kodak, and Sheriff Viberg was covered with a stream of water. Bob had touched the button. Shouts of laughter from those present followed, and Bob lit out of the nearest door.

ARABS AT LAW.

George E. Ellies, a dusky son of Arabia's shimmering sands, was brought before Justice Tancey last evening under arrest on capias proceedings for $75 claimed on account by Rossck Bodnare, another Arab. Of the amount claimed $55 is for money loaned and $20 for goods sold to defendant. The case went over under the defendant's recognizance for appearance until today and is being heard this afternoon. A. H. Bittenger is attorney for the plaintiff.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

A warrant for assault and battery was sworn out before Justice France last night against a man named Charles, whose surname is unknown. The complainant is Edward Britchard, and the hearing is set for today at 3 o'clock, at which hour the evidence in the case was taken up by the court.

TAILOR SHOP BURGLARIZED.

The tailor shop of August D. Meinzen, located on Calhoun street, between Douglass avenue and Brackenridge street, was entered by burglars last night and three pairs of pants and two coats stolen. Entrance was effected through a rear window, the nails that were in holes above it having been removed and the window easily raised. The officers have no clue to the burglars, but are on the lookout.

A suit was filed in Justice Ryan's court yesterday against Henry Meyers on the charge of selling liquor without a licence. The case was continued until today at 2 o'clock.

Delana Hensel has commenced a suit in Justice Tancey's court against Clara Moon for possession of realty.

Theodore D. Burdick has been given a physician's license by the county clerk, as has also W. H. Bell.

The garnishee case of Ada Woods against Jessie Moore has been dismissed by Justice Wilkinson.

Justice Ryan fined Philip Eringer $5 and costs for provoking Cyntha DeWitt. In default of payment, the defendant was sent to jail.

Dr. C. B. Mellougan, of Lake township, has resigned as justice of peace to accept the position of postmaster at Arcola.

BAD BARN BLAZE.

A Building and Its Contents in Madison Township Go Up in Smoke—A Serious Loss.

During an electrical storm late Sunday night a bolt of lightning struck the barn of Fred Renninger, a well-known farmer of Madison township, which set fire to the building. In two hours' time the barn, with all its contents, was reduced to ashes. A large quantity of hay and grain, besides agricultural implements, etc., went up in smoke. The building or its contents were not insured, hence the loss falls heavily to Mr. Renninger.

THE STATE ENCAMPMENT.

Opening Day at Frankfort—Details of Camp Life.

FRANKFORT, Ind., July 26.—The state military encampment opened formally today.

Everything is now in running order, but there is, of course, the accustomed kicking from the regimental quartermasters, who are endeavoring to get everything in sight, but with small success. The Second infantry, which is largely composed of Indianapolis companies, and which in past encampments has been on the grounds first and took the choice of everything, is not exactly in it, being the last of the infantry regiments to get their issues. The First infantry was the first on the grounds. Camp equipage and rations are all issued to the regimental quartermasters and by them reissued to the various companies. The rations consist of fresh beef, ham, cooked corn beef, potatoes, onions, rice, hominy, vinegar, bacon, pepper, salt, sugar, coffee, tea, extract of beef, Boston baked beans, navy beans, hardtack and soft bread, much better than most people think.

The signal corps is getting down to business. It has established posts, put up their wires, etc.

This year each of the companies carries its own water in buckets. No ice will be issued for the drinking water, as much of the sickness in camp last year was attributed to the ice, which was delivered every day, 200 pounds at a time, to each company.

Many of the people of Frankfort seem to have a mistaken idea in regard to the camp. They think it is some sort of a reunion and that the town will be completely in possession of the soldiers, but soldiers will be few and far between in Frankfort. The camp was full of visitors Sunday in carriages and walking, but now they will be surprised to have their way blockaded by sentries.

NEW ENGINE HOUSE.

Property Purchased for One of the New Fire Stations.

The fire commissioners will this evening report to the council their purchase of the property of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Drucker, 66 West Washington street, as a site for one of the new engine houses to supplant the present central engine house, which is soon to be torn down, that property having recently been purchased by the Tri-State Building and Loan association.

The new property is situated opposite the St. John's Reformed church. The consideration was $4,500. The new engine houses are to be of handsome design and will be ornaments to the city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Harteuff left for Petoskey today, where they will occupy a cottage until September.

SAW STRAYER.

An Old Railroad Partner Claims to Have Seen Him at Lima, Ohio, Last Friday.

The officers now think they have a clue to Strayer's whereabouts. Friday night last he was seen in Lima, Ohio, by a railroad man who, for a year or more, was a member of the same crew as Strayer on the Chicago and Erie railway. Strayer was severely cut and bruised and to this friend, who, at the time, knew nothing of the murder, said that he had received the injuries in a saloon fight. He further said he was going back home, meaning Huntington, to see his brother.

Yesterday a son of Isaac Reed, of Huntington, notified the Huntington officers that he had seen Strayer at Robert Belton's bottling works, just east of the city. A thorough search of the premises was made, but no person was found answering Strayer's description.

Belton and Strayer are life long friends and for years lived in adjoining houses.

Wednesday night Belton told a SENTINEL reporter, who was in Huntington, that if he saw Strayer he would advise him to give himself up. The officers are now working on this clue.

A SUNSTROKE.

John Connoly Succumbs to the Heat—Frequent Convulsions Threaten His Life.

The first severe and probably fatal case of sunstruke was reported today, the victim being John Conraty, an employe of the Pennsylvania company as oiler, at the east yards. He was conveyed to his home, 35 John street, today, suffering intensely and probably dying from the terrific effects of the prostration. He cannot be revived from the semi-conscious state he has been in since being overcome, and he frequently has sinking spells and convulsions. His recovery is hoped for but hardly probable. Mr. Conrady is at the head of a large family.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

Five American Tourists Plunged Into a Raging Mountain Torrent in Switzerland.

BERNE, July 26.—An accident occurred last evening in the rapid current of the River Reuss, canton of Uri, which rises near Mount St. Gerhard and enters Lake Lucerne after a course of thirty miles, in which the river descends 4,600 feet. Five American ladies and gentlemen who have been touring in Switzerland, were thrown into a boat in this rapid stream, the gentlemen guiding it. They were approaching the bridge known as Capellbrucke which connects the two parts of the city of Lucerne, situated on both banks of the house. The current was unusually swift on account of the melting snow and the gentlemen, notwithstanding strenous efforts, found themselves unable to guide the boat. The little craft was spun around by the current and carried swiftly on, the ladies clinging to the sides of the boat and the gentlemen vainly striving with the oars to keep it out of danger. A number of people saw the perilous situation of the craft and rushed to the banks of the river. Nothing could be done however, and the frail boat was swept with fearful force against the iron parapet of the bridge. The boat was smashed to pieces and the tourists were left struggling in the water. One lady sank with a piercing shriek and the others were about to go under when the spectators of the scene, who had been busy from the first preparing for the rescue, extended help to the unfortunates. The latter were pulled from out of the water up the open sides of the bridge and every possible effort was extended. In the moment more and every one would have perished. The rescuers waited a long time to see if the lady who sank would come to the surface, and the banks of the river were watched for a long distance but she did not reappear and was undoubtedly drowned. The affair has cast a gloom over the foreign visitors in Lucerne and today the bridge was thronged with visitors to the scene. The name of the American lady drowned in the river Reuss at Lucerne was Anne Sorge. She was thirty years of age and resided in St. Joseph, Mo. Her body has not been recovered.

Narrow Escape.

ST. LOUIS, July 26.—Last night one of the street cars of the Turnpike, at Bellville, Ill., broke down under the weight of a dozen passengers. The passengers had paid their fare and in order to get even with the company they turned the car in the ditch and the coal oil lamp upsetting the car was soon in flames. A crowd of people prevented the employes from extinguishing the fire. The timely arrival of a squad of police saved the car from total destruction.

The Cotton Crop.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 26.—The continued heavy rains lasting over two weeks, which terminated ten days ago, followed by a drought and exceedingly hot weather have seriously damaged the cotton crop in this section and unless there is rain within the next week, a great deal of the product will be rendered almost worthless.

'Twas our hottest day.

This weather is excellent—for corn.

The Homestead strike is losing much of its interest.

The heat is doing fatal work throughout the country.

The intense heat of this month is causing much sickness.

This is a good time to talk about public drinking fountains.

When the political campaign does open it will be a lively one.

Both political parties are arranging for a vigorous fight this year.

Hoosier corn is toiling upward in the night and in the daytime, too.

The city dads will tussle with municipal questions and the heat at the meeting of the council tonight.

Our electric cars are well patronized these hot summer evenings, a ride on them at that time being delightfully cool and refreshing.

The democracy of this county are in good fighting trim. Harmony reigns in our ranks, while the republicans are all torn up with party dissensions.

Elsewhere in today's Sentinel is published an interesting account of the officers to be elected this year in the various states. It is valuable for reference, and should be preserved.

The whereabouts of Strayer, the Fort Wayne murderer, is proving about as much of a mystery as the disappearance of Tascott, who murdered Snell at Chicago a few years ago. Would it not be well for the authorities to offer a reward for the capture of Strayer?

One by one the candidates for the position on the appellate bench, left vacant by the death of Judge Jeptha D. New, of Indianapolis, have withdrawn from the race until only Willard New, son of the deceased judge, remains. Governor Chase has given young New's friends to understand that he will be appointed. As the court will not be in session until September, there is no hurry about filling the place.

Some interesting data, compiled from the record of observations for the month of August, taken at this station during a period of twenty-one years, from the thermometer of the late Hon. F. P. Randall. The mean temperature for the month in this city is 73°. The warmest August record was that of 1881, when the average temperature was 75°, and the coldest that of 1885, when the average temperature was 70°. The highest temperature reached in August was in 1881, when the thermometer registered 101° on the 12th, and the lowest was in 1890, when the mercury fell to 46° on the 23rd.

During this extremely hot weather health suggestions are in order and here are some given by one of our exchanges: "Don't eat hot food or drink hot or intoxicating beverages; don't eat animal food except of the lightest variety; don't make unnecessary or violent physical exertion; don't drink iced water. It heats; remain without food or drink, except what may be indispensable for comfort, and very little will do; eat plain bread without butter; drink cool but not iced milk, cooled but not iced tea, cool but not iced coffee; don't wear unnecessary clothing don't go into the sun; have a quiet mind, a kindly heart, and take life calmly."

A novelty which is likely to be widely appreciated is a "postal" pen, i. e. a penholder fitted with a scale which gives the accurate weight and amount of postage of letters and small parcels. The pen nib is arranged at one end and the weigher at the other. The weigher consists of a carefully adjusted spring. The letter to be weighed is placed in a clip and the penholder is held in a vertical position. The indicator then marks the weight and postage of the letter. One of the nuisances of life is to have to go to the postoffice in order to ascertain the weight of a letter that is just on the border line between "light" and "heavy," and if the "postal" pen will banish forever this necessity it is a boon, indeed.

PLYMOUTH GRADUATES.

A Delightful Reunion Held at Warsaw, Ind.

Yesterday was temperance day at Spring Fountain Park assembly, and attending the exercises were about 150 men who had been redeemed from the drink habit by the Rotton treatment. These graduates of Plymouth institute had gathered to hold a reunion, and indeed it was a happy one. At 1 o'clock the company sat down to dinner at the hotel and then after three hours more of recreation in the park or on the lake, the party repaired to the auditorium where Rev. Charles H. Small, B. D., of Washington, D. C., delivered an address on "The Present Aspects of Temperance Work."

George W. Gordon, a traveling newspaper man, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide at Evansville by taking 250 grains of chloral. The cause of the attempt stated by himself was that he was tired of "being a high roller." He was on his way from Alabama to Cincinnati and was suffering from nervous prostration.

All branches of skilled labor in Wabash have unionized except the machinists, who will, within a fortnight, unionize. There are now over six hundred union men in Wabash, and the union wage scale and hours of labor are religiously observed. Three stores, whose proprietors refused to join the early closing movement, have been placed on the "unfair list" by the Industrial council of the city.

THE HOMESTEAD LABOR WAR.

An Indiana Workman Gives Some Inside History of the McKinley Bill.

Mr. James P. Appleby, who was a delegate to the convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, which was recently held at Pittsburg, said he fully anticipated the trouble that has since taken place. He further said that when the McKinley bill was before congress, the Republican leaders induced the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers to go to Washington and work for the passage of the bill, with the guarantee that if the bill was passed their wages would never again be reduced and that the mill owners would never ask a reduction. That the price of iron would be kept, by the provisions of the bill, at a sufficiently high figure to warrant the payment of the scale in force at that time. A committee was appointed by the association and the bill was passed. But the first time after the scale run out, the mill owners have demanded a reduction of from 20 to 60 per cent. in the wages of the iron workers. And still it is said by Republican papers that there is no politics in it.

Mr. Appleby is also authority for the statement that on Monday after the scale had been agreed upon by the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, Governor William McKinley, author of the bill that bears his name, was in Pittsburg in conference with the mill owners, but whether for or against the interests of the workmen it is not known. At any rate, only three or four mills out of sixty-two in the vicinity of Pittsburg signed the scale.

These are matters of which Mr. Appleby says he knows what he is talking about, as he was at Pittsburg during the entire session of the association. Mr. Appleby works in the New Albany rail mill and is well informed on matters pertaining to his calling.

What do workingmen think of the promises of the Republican leaders? Do they believe that high tariff means high wages? Not much.—New Albany Public Press.

Certificates of Nominations.

Under the Australian election law all nominations for offices to be filled next November must be certified to by the officers of the nominating conventions to the various election boards. The nominations made by the state convention are certified to the governor by the chairman and secretary. Nominations made by county conventions must be certified to the county clerk. The nomination of a representative in congress must be certified to each county clerk of the congressional district. The same is true of a nomination for joint senator, representative, circuit judge or prosecuting attorney. These certificates of nominations must be filed not later than thirty days before the election. But there is no penalty of delaying until the last moment the filing of nominations made early in the campaign. The execution of the certificates by the chairman and the secretary of the convention must be acknowledged before a notary public or before some other officer vested with a power to administer oath. The chairman or secretary of an early convention might remove from the state or county or absent himself during a long period, and for this reason certificates should be made out as soon as the convention adjourns. Chairman Taggart, of the state committee, will furnish blank certificates upon application.

Month in Old Age.

Edward Collison, Queens, L. I., says: "I commenced using Ramon's Pills over fifty-five years ago. I first bought them in London, and have continued using them since I came to this county in 1856. I am now over seventy-five years old, hale and hearty, and attribute my wonderful health to the persistent use of Ramon's Pills. Occasionally I have a bad cold or severe attack of rheumatism, indigestion or biliousness, but four or five doses of Ramon's Pills soon put me right. Whenever my children have been sick with scarlet fever, measles, acid stomach, disordered digestion or costiveness, a few doses of Ramon's Pills restored their health at once."

Only twenty-six of the 4,207 vessels that passed through the Suez canal last year bore the American flag.

Opening the Canal.

The most acceptable proposition that can be made to persons troubled with chronic constipation is to open that important canal—the bowels. The proposition will be carried out by the parties interested if they resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the most effective, gentle general alterative extant. It is the mistake of many otherwise sensible people, that they resort to drastic, or, in other words, violent cathartics. Without exaggeration, this is highly injurious, since such medicines weaken the bowels besides convulsing both them and the stomach with pain. Relief comes from the Bitters comes firmly enough, but they never produce pain, excessive action, or subsequent weakness of the bowels. Liver and kidney troubles, malaria, dyspepsia, lack of stamina and a tendency to rheumatism, are remedied by this pleasant substitute for drenching cathartics.

MOTHER DID IT.

He sat at the dinner table
With a discontented frown;
The potatoes and steak were underdone
And the bread was baked too brown;
The pie was too sour, the pudding too sweet,
And the roast was much too fat;
The soup so greasy, too, and salt,
'Twas hardly fit for the cat.

"I wish you could eat the bread and pie
I've seen my mother make;
They are something like, and 'twould do you good.
Just to look at a loaf of her cake."
Said the smiling wife: "I'll improve with age—
Just now I am but a beginner;
But your mother has come to visit us,
And to-day she cooked dinner."

GRACE AND GOBBLE.

The man were raised in the same village. Their fathers had owned adjoining farms. When the boys had grown into men, Grace stayed on the farm and Gobble went to the city. They had breathed the same country air; had gazed upon the same old oak trees along the dusty village street; had gone to the same old weather-beaten school house to pore and doze over the same dog eared and begrimed volumes containing the mysteries of 'rondin,' 'ritin' and 'ritmetic" had gone fishing for "mud-cats" in the shallow yellow pond in the hollow beyond the town—instead of going to Sunday school, as commanded by their parents, and had smoked their first "home made" cigar under the sandy old bridge on the road this side of town—and experienced pretty much the same deathly sensation that usually accompanies an initiate venture of this kind—with the solemn maxim of the preacher ringing in their ears that the "wages of sin is death."

Yet, with all this sameness, the two were wholly unlike in disposition and thought after arriving at maturity. Gobble loved to own things. It did not matter to him much what they were—just so he exercised ownership over them—that gave him momentary pleasure. "Grace, on the other hand, didn't care a copper who owned the universe, just so he had a right to enjoy its beauties and comforts. His face was always wreathed in smiles, and it really made people feel pleased to be in his company. Not so with Gobble. He wanted to own everything. If he could have obtained a warranty deed to the earth he would have greedily accepted it, and accepted rent from every inch of territory therein mentioned. It gave him an intense pang in the region of his pancreas whenever he beheld a desirable piece of property that he could not possess. He loved money. It did not matter much of what material composed. A mouldy bank note gave him the same thrilling sensations as a bright coin fresh from the mint. He had no interest in anything disconnected from gain. The glorious panorama of a June night, the incense-laden zephyrs of May, and the chaste and immaculate crystalline beauties of December's wreaths and draperies, were unseen by his dull eye. There was "no money" in these things for the proprietor to him. If he could have erected a tent sufficiently spacious to exclude the sun, moon and stars from the gaze of man, and been permitted to charge for the privilege of viewing them through a hole in the canvas, perhaps he would have taken some interest in the subject; but, as it was, he saw nothing worthy of interest in these things common to everybody, who might enjoy them for nothing. He often contemplated what great things could be made by a corporation having a monopoly of these free gifts of nature. If he could have obtained so many dollars for each square yard of sunlight or so many dollars for each cubic foot of fresh air, or so many dimes for every whiff of the blossoming flowers of spring, he would have been an interested, if not a happy, individual. People approached him with diffidence. His presence begot a chilling sensation in others. Persons who knew him intimately, when they looked at him, they involuntarily thrust their hands into their pockets and grasped their purses. His very appearance did suggest "hand me over your money," or, "give me a mortgage on your place and I will lend you money at ten per cent interest and ten per cent discount on the loan."

Gobble was not an irreligious man, and his propensity for accumulating things did not stop at earthly acquisitions. Being a firm believer in immortality, he did not neglect to make a deal in celestial futures, but his investments in this direction were meager—in fact, on a very limited scale. Heaven did not have the same attractions for him it had for others. Yet, he knew, when he died, that, from all accounts, it was about the next best place to this earth. He always sighed when he thought of this move he would, at some time or other, be compelled to make. No, it gave him no pleasure to think of changing his field of operations. Here, he was the owner of thousands of miles of railroads, hundreds of steamers, thousands of bonds and mortgages, thousands of acres of land, and houses; what could he do with himself up there? It is true he was promised a mansion in the sky, but so was every other man who emigrated to that not yet definitely located or explored region. So he reasoned with himself that it must in the end be a rather poor place to a man of his disposition. What should he do in the New Jerusalem, where everybody owned a mansion, and where he had no assurance they did a mortgage or land and railroad grabbing business?

But, as he thought it inevitable, he schooled himself to the belief that though heaven might be a dull place it was somewhat more preferable than hell, which, from all accounts he had received, was said to be intensely unsalubrious, and with a constant high range of thermometer.

The beggar went useful from his door for several reasons; first, it was not a good investment—it brought no returns; second, it was encouraging idleness; third, it diminished his resources.

He was as far as the world could see, that is externally, a very respectable man, indeed.

Grace was otherwise. He worked on the old farm, the home of his infancy, boy and manhood. He worked (not overly much), ate, drank, and thanked God for the blessings of an Allotment. When he killed a fat hog or steer he sent a generous portion to his neighbors; the hungry tramp never left his door unfed, although he knew quite well that he was often his dupe. Money had no charms for him outside the good offices for which it could be used. He felt sorry for Gobble, because he enjoyed so little of the world's true pleasures. But Gobble had a contempt for Grace because he had no business sense, and would never be worth anything in a financial way.

Gobble died. He left a large estate—to be divided among his heirs. It was soon scattered, and found its way back to the struggling masses from whom it had been wrung. He was buried with what clothes were on his back and in the ground of all his vast estates he now occupied was the conventional "two by six."

The angels met him on the confines of the outer world to convey him to the realm of souls. They were not at all awed at the vast possessions he had left. This was a surprise to him, but when he began to look upon himself he found himself as bankrupt as the new born babe. If garments for souls had been for sale he would not have been able to buy a single thread. As he journeyed through space he frequently interrogated his heavenly guides as to the probable value of Mercury, Venus or Jupiter, and was surprised to see so many valuable real estate and minerals without being able to obtain some of it for purposes of speculation. He made rapid calculations as to the probable value of the minerals in the "mountains of the moon;" if they could be carried to market. When he finally reached the pearly gates of heaven he experienced an intense pang of finding they were not for sale. He tried to form an estimate of their value, but was hurried through by his guides before he could accomplish it. He almost fainted from unbounded delight when he trod the streets leading into the city of New Jerusalem, but when he was told by his companions that there were no mayor and board of aldermen to bribe into selling him even as much as a perch, his anguish became intense.

When they passed the beautiful, flower-bedecked meadows, interlaced with silvery streams, on the banks of which stood beautiful evergreen trees, he exclaimed:

"Oh, what a beautiful place to raise wheat, potatoes, corn and beans! How much—how much will it cost per acre?"

Again he was informed that the property was not for sale. They looked on by exhaustless silver, gold and diamond mines.

"And are none of those things for sale?" he again ventured to ask.

None came the reply.

"And can none of this real estate in the suburbs of the city be bought for the purpose of extending the city limits?"

"It is not for sale."

"Oh, then, take me far away from here," exclaimed poor Gobble, "this is indeed a less desirable place than hell!"

"No indeed," said his guide, "here you must remain, and famish in your greed."

Grace died, too. Of this world's goods he left not many. He had scarcely divested himself of his body when the heavenly escorts arrived to transport him to his future home. He, in such a good-natured, free-and-easy fellow the angels were really glad to make his acquaintance. They indulged in little pleasantries along the route and over and then burst out in merry laughter over some of his jolly sallies. This was enjoyed by the guides the more since their conversation with old Gobble was full of dull and disagreeable affair. Grace was rapt in admiration during the entire journey, the wondrous mysteries of the universe filling him with awe. He never once thought of setting a price upon them. But he thought within himself how great and good must be the Creator of them. When he finally entered the jeweled gates of the city he was lost in rapture at the wondrous beauty which met his gaze at every turn. When he was conducted to his mansion his joy could know no bounds; but not for a moment did he cherish the desire to lessen the joy of his neighbors by coveting their possessions or monopolizing the remainder of Paradise.—Albert Delleign in the Arkansaw Traveler.

MAD DOG!

Frenchtown Greatly Excited by a Case of Rabies—The Animal Shot by Firemen.

"Mad dog! Look out for the mad dog!" was the cry which rang out in the still twilight on Charles and Wallace streets last evening. Instantly there was a great commotion. Fathers and mothers who were enjoying the coolness of the front yards sprang to their feet and ran hither and thither in search of their children. When all were found they retired to their houses and with barred doors and windows watched anxiously from second stories for the object of their fright. Soon a large dog came tearing down Charles street to Hanna, thence to Wallace and to Gerding & Auman's tin shop, where he sprang over the fence and laid down in the yard, snapping and snarling at imaginary foes. The firemen at engine house No. 2 armed themselves and set out in pursuit of the rabid animal. When the brute was found a bullet from the revolver of one of the brave firemen speedily ended his career. The owner of the dog has not been found. There is no evidence that the mad animal had bitten any other dog, yet the residents of that part of the city feel very uneasy and will insist on all dogs being carefully muzzled for a time, at least. There is no doubt about this being a case of hydrophobia. The dog, as he lay in the yard adjoining the tin shop, frothed at the mouth, barked savagely at times, and had every other symptom of the rabies.

A Fish Story.

The item in last evening's SENTINEL, stating that a new fish market was to soon open on Harrison street, caught the eye of the fish editor, and as this individual was running short of fish stories, he took a walk in the direction of 18 Harrison street. He found Mr. Lewis very busy getting ready to get open on Thursday. The fish editor was surprised at the completeness of the arrangements and fittings of this market. Large ice boxes, made especially to Mr. Lewis' order, in great variety, marble top counter and marble base to show window, all made to order, &c., all indicated that it is to be first class and second to none.

Mr. Lewis will keep not only all the usual varieties of lake fish such as is usually kept, but a full stock of fish from the New England coast, such as Cod, Halibut, Blue Fish, Mackerel, etc., as well as fish from the Gulf of Mexico, such as Red Snapper, Pompano, Spanish Mackerel, etc., as well as Clams and Lobsters and Oysters in their season. Mr. Lewis has put in a telephone (No. 451), and will at once put on a delivery wagon and deliver fish in any part of the city, all dressed ready for the pan.

Mr. Lewis says he will be ready to open up Thursday evening, and invites the people to come in and see the best and largest variety of fish ever shown in Fort Wayne.

Points and Pointers

One day a gentleman was passing by a gentlemen's furnishing goods store—not a men's furnishing goods store, do you mind, but a Gentlemen's furnishing goods store—in the plate-glass window of which he saw displayed a carefully arranged lot of handsome outing shirts.

"Those are neat," said the pedestrian, mentally, and he went inside, where, after viewing the shirts at his leisure, he told the gentlemanly gentlemen's furnishing goods man that he might tie up the one with the fine blue stripe, the olive-colored one and the one with the suggestion of pink in it.

"Now," said the man, "I'll see if I can keep cool. How much do you want?"

"Ten dollars and a half," was the reply, and the man got hot. It would make any man hot to have to pay three dollars and a half for a regular two-dollar article.

What you want to do is to casually ask the price in three little stores, and then come over here for your shirts. Let us get the drop on you.

A successful business man says that one of the helpful rules he learned from his father was to have "a place for everything."

This is one of the open secrets of our success. You can get anything from a white lawn tie to a full dress suit at our store. It is the place for everything. We don't expect the profits on a couple of boxes of flannel shirts, and a variegated dozen of soft hats, and a few pretty sashes to pay our running expenses for the entire heated term.

We know that cost is not the first consideration in the purchase of outing goods. With some, we fear, it is not taken into account at all. Before all things, a young fellow who gets himself up in a summer costume wants to look killing. He isn't after the lowest prices so much. It's kind of a holiday business with him, and he pays fifty per cent. too much for his outfit as cheerfully as the man at the circus pays fifty per cent. too much for lemonade. Got darn the expense when you are out for fun. But what is the use of being so reckless?

We'll hit your fancy in summer togs—we've got a big stock, and what you save by buying here you stuff in your little watch pocket and think no more about it until the first flush of excitement has passed away and you begin to realize that you won't be flush again till Fall. Then is the time when a little wad of crumpled money opens out large and smiles in your face like morning sunshine.

It is well, sometimes, to look toward the future and not think of the present alone; but if you will look at the present, why not save money as we suggest? That is as good as a present.

Sam, Pete & Max.
